

ntuc

National Trades Union Congress

SINGAPORE LABOUR JOURNAL

REFLECT • REIMAGINE • RESTRATEGISE

Brief Abstracts of Journal Articles

2022 / Volume 1 / Issue 1

REFLECT • REIMAGINE • RESTRATEGISE

The Singapore Labour Journal is a compilation of articles drawn from insights of academics and practitioners to curate a unique perspective on labour issues. This inaugural issue embodies the collective journey with academics and practitioners, to reflect on current labour issues, reimagine new approaches and restrategise the way forward.

Mobilising Workers via Digital Means: Reinventing Trade Unions for the Digital Age

Explores how the organisation of workers through digital means can benefit Singapore's trade unions in light of the country's economic and employment climate, and the historical trajectory of trade unions.

Continuing Education and Training: Looking Through the Lens of Business Leaders in Singapore

Investigates the training and learning opportunities of workers by business leaders in Singapore and discusses recommendations on how Continuing Education and Training can be enhanced to upskill our workers to meet the needs of today's and tomorrow's labour market.

Power to Participate: Building Young Voices, Choices and Experiences

Examines the future needs of young workers and how the labour union membership model could evolve to stay relevant to current and future workers.

National Trades Union Congress (NTUC)'s Changing Role in Shaping Singapore's Evolving Work Compact

Outlines NTUC's forward response of social dialogue towards longer-term socioeconomic, demographic and other disruptive trends Singapore faces, and inviting individual stakeholders and partners to partake in consultation and policy co-creation for the future.

The Journey of Engaging and Organising Workers Through Digital Means

Examines the motivations that the Singapore Supply Chain Employees' Union (SCEU) had in embarking on their journey of engaging and organising workers through digital means and discusses the challenges that need to be addressed for successful organising.

Supporting Workforce and Company Transformation Through the Labour Movement: Company Training Committees and Training and Placement Ecosystem

Explores how the Labour Movement in Singapore, through the Company Training Committee partnerships and the Training and Placement ecosystem, continues to achieve its core purpose to advance workers' interests while helping companies to meet their business outcomes.

Can We Do More to Help PMEs Overcome Disruption and Discrimination in the Next Normal?

Discusses the key concerns and needs of Professionals, Managers and Executives (PMEs) in Singapore, and the recommendations to enhance the employment and employability of PMEs.

Supporting Youth to Realise Their Aspirations and Address Their Needs

Examines the support Young NTUC, the youth wing of the National Trades Union Congress, offers to youth in Singapore to help them realise their aspirations and address issues faced by the youth.

To view the journal, scan the QR code or visit www.ntuc.org.sg/SingaporeLabourJournal

Copyright © 2023 NTUC. All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise, without the prior written permission of the publishers.

ntuc

National Trades Union Congress

#EVERY WORKER
MATTERS

MEMBERSFIRST
WORKERSALWAYS