Chew Hock Joo

Council Member

Food, Drinks and Allied Workers Union (FDAWU)

Nominated by the Food, Drinks and Allied Workers Union

Chew Hock Joo is a role model for workers in the industry, exemplifying dedication and commitment. As a key member of his organisation's Company Training Committee, he actively participates in transformative discussions, championing progressive initiatives to upskill workers and future-proof their careers in an ever-evolving landscape. He played a pivotal role in supporting job transformation efforts, where security officers were upskilled to take on technician roles and vice versa, creating versatile, multi-skilled employees and enhancing job prospects across the workforce.

As a security officer, Brother Hock Joo takes workplace safety and health (WSH) very seriously, going above and beyond to ensure a safe and secure environment for everyone. He consistently emphasises the importance of adhering to safety protocols and takes a proactive approach to identify and mitigate potential risks. His commitment to WSH has not only improved safety standards but also instilled greater awareness among his peers.

As a union leader, Brother Hock Joo embodies the spirit of solidarity and service. He is a constant presence at union events, always volunteering his time and energy to support the Labour Movement and enhance the welfare of workers. His selfless contributions reflect his deep-rooted commitment to the values of unity and progress for all.
