PARTNER OF LABOUR MOVEMENT

Jackson Koh Yeh Sheng

Director (Human Resource & Organisation Development)
Ministry of Culture, Community and Youth

Nominated by the Amalgamated Union of Public Employees.

When he joined the Public Service Division (PSD), Jackson Koh Yeh Sheng brought over his extensive expertise in workforce development and human resources, which allowed him to play a key role in advocating for the welfare of employees.

Throughout his tenure at PSD, he recognised the efforts of the Amalgamated Union of Public Employees (AUPE) in striving to improve the conditions and well-being of public officers. As such, he worked closely with the union, engaging in meaningful and constructive discussions aimed at advancing workforce development – ensuring better working conditions for civil servants.

Brother Jackson strongly supported AUPE's initiatives and actively championed their causes. His contributions have resulted in a lasting positive impact for both the workforce and the public service sector.

He exemplifies the Public Service Week's principles of "Innovate, Grow, Care – Make a Difference for Tomorrow" and is deeply committed to the growth and development of public officers. He actively promotes training and offers diverse experiential opportunities within and outside the public sector. He is also known for his dedication towards helping officers prepare for the future through learning, reskilling, and adapting to change.

As a key member of the Public Service Cluster Training Committee (PS CTC), Brother Jackson facilitated alignment and collaboration between public agencies and unions to support workforce transformation. He has been a strong advocate for new skills such as digital literacy, design thinking, and systems thinking to enhance officers' capabilities.
